

Unevenly sized letters

Letters that are different sizes make your writing uneven. They get out of line and distract the reader. The most usual culprits are 's' and 'k'. They are complex letters that have several changes of direction to make in a small space.

The letters 's' and 'k' are too tall. A less complicated movement will help.

Simplify them or practise until they work better for you.

Sometimes bad joins make letters like this 's' stick out, so lift your pen instead. The 'p' needs attention too.

there slower strokes

This writer must slow down. He is going so fast that he cannot control the 's' in the word 'these' or complete the 'k' in 'strokes'.

better know

Don't cut too many corners at speed. 'better known' reads as 'better brown'.

Tension can distort your writing and make your letters vary in size. Relax.
